

Call For Submissions (Distributed Special Issue of Ethnic Studies Review):
“Origin Stories of Ethnic Studies”

Due Date: Ongoing (to be “distributed” across several issues)
Publication Date: Ongoing

Guest Editors:

Kristopher Bryan Burrell Hostos Community College, CUNY, kburrell@hostos.cuny.edu
Carla J. DuBose Simons, Westchester Community College, SUNY, carla.dubose@sunywcc.edu

Description

The Ethnic Studies Review seeks submissions for a distributed special issue about origin stories of Ethnic Studies at colleges and universities. ESR is interested in articles, interviews, creative work, and conversations that illustrate the struggles that were necessary to form Ethnic Studies programs as a way of demonstrating why these programs are still necessary and relevant in the present. The journal desires to illustrate the ways in which ethnic studies programs were born out of social movement politics and were responses to the social movements of the day. Ethnic Studies programs represent a dialectic between the university and grassroots struggles of today.

Submission Guidelines

- Submissions should be 4000 - 5000 words.
- Please follow Chicago Manual of Style guidelines.
- Academic and research-based article submissions will be peer reviewed, and should be submitted via the Scholastica portal: <https://esr.scholasticahq.com/>
- Interviews and other writing forms, or creative work, will be collaboratively reviewed and should be emailed directly to the guest editors.
- Indicate that submission is intended for “Origin Stories of Ethnic Studies”

Further Information:

- Please email the Guest Editors with any questions about this special issue, including possible essay topics or creative formats.
- Full journal submission guidelines: <https://online.ucpress.edu/esr/pages/submit>